We urge HSUS members to buy only tuna carrying the "Dolphin Safe" label. Until some point after October 1990, this label will appear only on products produced by StarKist and Chicken of the Sea.

MARCHING FOR ANIMALS

The March for the Animals swept up Constitution Avenue to the Capitol steps on June 10. More than 24,000 people attended, representing all fifty states and carrying state banners provided by the organizers, the National Alliance for Animal Legislation. The HSUS, supporting the event, set up an information booth with other animal-protection organizations at the Capitol, addressing the need for reverence for all life forms with which we share this planet.

March's starting point near the White House. The HSUS's Dr. Michael W. Fox spoke to the marchers from the steps of the

DIVISION REPORTS

TEACHER OF THE YEAR NAMED

The National Humane Education Teacher of the Year Award is a most satisfying endeavor for the National Association for Humane and Environmental Education (NAHEE) because it serves as a way to highlight the accomplishments of excellent, committed, compassionate teachers—many of whom NAHEE has not previously known.

The 1990 National Humane Education Teacher Award goes to Karin Lindahl, a dedicated educator whose concerns for animals, children, and the environment expressed itself in numerous ways throughout the twenty years of her teaching career. Ms. Lindahl is a kindergarten teacher at Keyser Elementary School in Kirkwood, Missouri. While working with young children, she has consistently created lessons on a wide range of animal topics in a way that exemplifies compassion not only for animals but also for the sensitive minds of kindergarteners.

Ms. Lindahl's innovative lessons give students a chance to learn about animal protection and to take action. Most recently, her students created a rain forest banner and sent it to the government of the United States, expressing their concern about continuous destruction of the only rain forest in the United States. They have also raised funds for lowland gorillas and endangered whales, created bulletin boards on pet care for the local humane society, and donated supplies to their local wildlife rehabilitation center. The death of a blue jay from pesticide poisoning gave Ms. Lindahl an opportunity to help students develop awareness of the ways in which people unintentionally harm the Earth. The arrival in class of a student hostile to ideas about animal protection provided the basis for an important lesson. With Ms. Lindahl's assistance, students learned the importance of being compassionate toward those who do not share beliefs in compassion toward all.

NAHHE W Award is a most satisfying endeavor for the HSUS's Teacher of the Year award. Ms. Van Horn is a sixth grade language arts teacher at Brownsville Middle School in Pensacola, Florida. She instituted and oversees a Junior Humane Society for students at her school. In raising awareness for animal protection, volunteering at shelters, supporting local environmental protection ordinances, and recycling, her JHS students have learned that what they say and do can have a positive impact on the world.
