What Do You Want To Be?

Would you like to be a veterinarian? A zoo director? A canine control officer? Or a dog groomer? In all these jobs you'd have the chance to work with animals daily.

Other animal workers don't really see animals every day. Yet these workers still help animals, too.

A humane society secretary may help animals by giving people advice on the phone. Much of a conservation worker's job is counting animals and preserving habitats. Park rangers help people learn about animals so they will appreciate them more. Even a forester helps animals by caring for their woodland homes.

Would you like to work with animals? Find out if there are places where you can learn more about animal jobs. Look at lots of jobs. You may find out that working with animals is right for you.
KIND Awards Program

Do you know people who are KIND to people or animals or both? KIND would like to help you say "Thank You" to those people.

Write and tell us who they are. Tell us what they have done or what they are doing. We'll study your story. If we think they should get an award, we'll send it to you so that you can give it to them. Be a KIND detective!
Dear KIND,

Here are my answers on your questionnaire.
I would like to say that everyone who works on our KIND newsletter does a terrific job. I have some pen pals from KIND and they say the same thing. I really enjoy your newsletter.

I think it was a good idea to put in a puzzle page and I enjoy all your stories and the pictures are even more informative and they add to the stories.

Colleen Reilly, age 11

Dear KIND,

I would like to read more things about ways to be kind to dogs. Is a back yard big enough to give a dog exercise, or is a walk better?

Faith Sabo, age 10

If the fenced in area is bigger than your whole house, it's big enough for a small dog. But a big dog might enjoy more room. Taking your dog for a walk is one way to be kind. Train your dog to obey commands, then walk him on a leash. -Ed.

Dear KIND,

I like your paper. So does my sister. But you should have more animals in the paper, like skunks and roosters.

Your friend, Lynne Mayer, age 9½

Dear KIND,

I have started a Nature Club in my neighborhood. I believe strongly in freedom for all living things and a right to live a good life.

Sincerely yours, Gareth James, age 10

Branch Club News

Garden City, NY — The Woodpecker Club held a carnival. We had log and hammer sack races. We had also the famous KIND Ride, in which we had stuffed animals and pictures. We raised $3.00, which we are sending to KIND to help animals. New officers have also been elected for this new year.
Dear friends,

Even if you don’t think working with animals is the job for you, it’s good to know there are all those people who do enjoy working with animals. I think the animals appreciate what they’re doing to help them, too.

Have you ever noticed how friendly and kind everyone is at Christmas? Then when it’s all over, sometimes we forget to be cheerful and helpful. But some people don’t. I hope you’ll be on the lookout for such people. Giving you a chance to vote for kind people is our way of keeping the spirit of Christmas all through the year.

your friend,
