Get Ready for Walsh’s Animals!

The man who looks like he’s having a conversation with a tortoise is John Walsh. He’s the host of a new 10 part TV program called Walsh’s Animals. Mr. Walsh shares his TV time with dogs, wolves, lions, pumas, snakes, catfish, rodents, and lots of other creatures.

John Walsh is an animal lover and a humane worker — if you can separate the two. He’s saved animals from floods in South America. He’s fed starving huskies in Alaska. He’s helped animals caught in oil spills. And he’s worked to stop cock fights here in the U.S. Mr. Walsh has spent his adult life helping and learning about animals. Now, with the help of your TV, he’s going to show you and tell you about it.

The first program will be shown on Sunday, November 10 over the PBS (education) stations. Be sure to check your local newspapers for the correct time. The other programs will be shown on the following Sundays through January 12.

The Wolf in Your Backyard is the title of the first program. It’s all about your dog. You’ll also learn about giving first aid to an injured dog. And you’ll see the problems caused by the overpopulation of dogs. Hope you’ll be watching.
The Short Kind

Martha Flies One Last Time

She died in 1914. She was the last passenger pigeon ever to live on Earth. She had been captured and lived at the Cincinnati Zoo. Her name was Martha.

For 60 years now Martha’s stuffed, lifeless body has been on display in the Smithsonian Museum in Washington, D.C.

Not long ago Martha was flown back to Cincinnati. In her honor a Passenger Pigeon Memorial Fund was started to fix up the old birdhouse where she once lived.

At one time nearly half of all the birds in America were passenger pigeons. There were billions of them. They darkened the sky as they flew over in huge flocks. Hunters shot them and sold them by the barrel. Now they are extinct.

Museum officials have said she is too old and fragile ever to be moved again. Her lifeless flight reminds us how fragile our Earth is and how careful we must be to protect all life.

Helping Animals

Humane societies are set up to help animals. They may also be called S.P.C.A. (Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals), or Animal Welfare league. Sometimes people don’t realize they are being cruel to animals. So the best way to prevent cruelty is to educate people.

As a KIND member, you are a junior member of The Humane Society of the United States, largest of the humane societies.

Humane societies depend on donations from their members to help animals. There are some very fine humane societies. But there are also some that are not too careful how they use the gifts they receive. You may hear a lot about them, because they put ads in newspapers and magazines. But the real test is what they actually do to help animals.

If you want to give a donation to a humane society, learn all you can about it. Then decide if you think your gift will be used wisely and carefully to help animals.

Find The Baby Animals

First write the name of the baby animal for the animals listed below. Then find those animals’ names in the puzzle. They read across, down, or on a slant like this \ or like this. None of the names reads backwards.

Photo Contest

---Winner---

Winner of KIND’s Summer Photo Contest is Jodi Cherrie, of Princeton, IL. Notice how well Jodi has captured the light and dark areas in the photo. She shot the picture ‘in the shade. Notice the bell on the cat to warn birds. If you look closely, you’ll also see that the cat is on a leash.

Cherry Hill, NJ — Members of the fourth grade class of St. Andrews Methodist Church School pose with the bedding they have collected for animals at their local animal shelter. Their teacher, Mrs. Gordon Malick, is handing John Metzler a check for $50. The class raised the money to buy food for the animals. Charles Via, Superintendent of the School, is at left.

Dear friends,

Animals need all the help we can give them. John Walsh is helping animals by telling T.V. viewers how important animals are to us. You can tell your friends.

You've never seen a passenger pigeon alive. Nor have I. Your parents haven't either. Nor your grandparents. Your great grandparents might have seen one.

Thanksgiving is a time to be thankful we haven't lost more animals, like the passenger pigeon. And, as we enroll more KIND members, we can do more. Get your friends to join, and renew, yourself.

Your friend,
